Keys of Opening

Key #15

Have a beginner's mind.

Hold yourself in a place of openness.

What does beginner's mind mean to you and how did you apply this to your time spent with your wild-scape?

Having a beginner's mind can open up whole new worlds to us. What exciting new worlds opened up for you this week?

Did you learn something new this week about yourself and how you relate to your wild-scape?

Did your connection to the place change in anyway? If so, how?

Did connecting to your wild-scape with a beginner's mind inspire new directions, actions, or approaches in how you engage with the place? If so, what did you discover?

Ideas, elements, aspects of the place to deepen with:

Listening to the Land

"For things to reveal themselves to us, we need to be ready to abandon our views about them."
